Meet the Kākāpō!

Kakapos have beautiful yellow - green barred feathers.

The green is actually living moss!

The kakapo, also known as the “night parrot,” is a unique and fascinating bird from New Zealand. They are the world’s only flightless parrot and are nocturnal, meaning it’s most active at night. Kakapos have a face that looks a bit like an owl’s hence a common name, the “Owl Parrot”.

They are the heaviest parrots, weighing up to 9 pounds!

Sadly, kakapos are critically endangered, with only a few hundred left in the wild. Conservation efforts are ongoing to help protect these amazing birds.
